Part One: Reading comprehension: (40 points)

Question Number One: (20 points)

Text A: Read the text carefully, then answer the questions below:

We often hear people say, 'It's a small world, isn't it?' It's usually when they've just experienced one of those strange coincidences that seem to happen in nearly everyone's lives. You know the kind of thing: you're on holiday in another country and you run into a person you know from home, even though neither of you knew that the other was going there too.

People often think experiences like this are evidence of something mysterious happening, some kind of hidden plan outside our knowledge. The scientific explanation is less exciting, and perhaps that's why some people are reluctant to accept it. Coincidences are events that unexpectedly happen at the same time for no clear reason, or finding an unexpected connection between seemingly random things or people. A very common example of the latter is talking to a complete stranger and finding that you have the same birthday. What are the chances of that happening?

Actually, the chances are better than you might think, and there's a mathematical way to prove it. It has been calculated that the number of people you need to have a 50% chance of two of them sharing a birthday is 23. And when there are 48 people in a room, the probability goes up to 95%. To put it another way, if there are only 50 people reading these words (and I hope there are more!), one of them will almost certainly have the same birthday as me.

The other part of the scientific explanation for coincidences is simply that there are so many events in people's lives. Just think of the number of people that you have had any kind of connection with during your life. There are probably over 10,000, and the older you get, the more there will be. If you are the kind of person who talks to strangers, you will definitely come across coincidences. Basically, when you think about how complex our lives are, especially nowadays with the Internet, the only surprising thing is that coincidences don't happen more often.

A. Answer the following questions. (6points)

1. Why are people unwilling to accept the scientific explanation?
2. According to the text, how do scientists prove coincidences?
3. What is the only surprising thing, according to the writer?

Question Number Two: (20 points)

Text B: Read the text carefully, then answer the questions below:

..... Communication technology refers to the tools and systems people use to share information, such as mobile phones, the internet, social media platforms, and instant messaging applications. Over the past few decades, these technologies have transformed how individuals, businesses, and communities connect with one another.

..... One of the most important effects of communication technology is the speed of information exchange. People can now send messages, photos, and videos within seconds, no matter where they are in the world. This has made it easier for families to stay in touch, for students to access educational resources, and for workers to collaborate remotely.

..... Another major impact is the increase in global awareness. Social media allows people to learn about events happening in different countries and to share their opinions with a wide audience. This can help raise awareness of social issues, promote cultural understanding, and encourage collective action.

..... However, communication technology also has negative effects. Spending too much time on screens can reduce face-to-face interaction and weaken real-life relationships. Social media may spread misinformation quickly, and constant online connectivity can cause stress, distraction, and pressure to always be available.

..... In conclusion, communication technology has greatly improved the way people interact and access information, but it also brings challenges that require responsible and balanced use. By understanding both the benefits and the drawbacks, individuals can make better choices about how they use these powerful tools.

A. Match the headings with the suitable paragraphs: (5points)

1. Negative Effects of Technology
2. Introduction to Communication Technology
3. Global Awareness
4. Conclusion
5. Faster Communication
