Reading Comprehension: (40 points)

Question Number One: Read the following text and do the tasks below. (20 points)

The results of a new po ll show that financial problems have taken over from the environment as the main concern for young people. The survey asked 12,000 people aged between 14 and 18 what they were most worried about. The clear w inner was "finding a job", while the environment was only the seventh greatest worry. This compares with similar polls in the last fifteen years, when environmental worries came first.

One of the poll's organisers commented that the results demonstrated a clear change in attitude. "It's not just that getting a j ob is the main worry," he said. "Also included in the top six worries were getting into debt (6th) and passing exams (4th=). I'm convinced that there's a connection. Because of changes in the job market, there is more and more pressure on young people nowadays to pass exams and go on to university in the hope of finding a good job. And rising university fees make it inevitable that many students graduate from university with huge debts.

أ. محمد سيف

Other concerns mentioned by large numbers of young people also tended to be personal rather than social, including worries about rel ationships (2nd), health(3rd) and 'fitting in with peers'(4th=).

Annette Coleman, director of the Green Earth organisation, said yesterday that she was 'disappointed, but not surprised' at the fall in the number of young people concerned about the environment. 'It's not that the environmental concerns are less urgent than before – quite the opposite in fact. It's just that after decades of publicity on topics like climate change, so little has actually changed. A lot of people get the feeling that there's nothing we can do about it, and young people in particular tend to be impatient. Of course, the other thing is that in times of economic difficulty, people are more likely to focus on worries that are more immediate and have an impact on their daily lives'.

In recent years, modern technology has changed the way people communicate. Many adults feel worried because they did not grow up using phones, apps, and social media the way young people do. For them, the digital world is fast and difficult to understand, so they are not sure how to guide or control young people's behaviour online.

Because of this, parents are afraid of several dangers on the internet. One major risk is cyberbullying, where people send hurtful messages or post embarrassing photos which make young people feel sad or stressed. Another danger is talking to strangers online. Some strangers may lie about who they are, and parents worry that children might trust them or share personal information.

Parents are also worried about inappropriate content, such as violent or harmful videos that can affect a child's thinking and behaviour. In addition, spending too much time on the internet can lead to addiction, causing students to ignore homework, lose sleep or suffer from insomnia, or stop spending time with family and friends. For these reasons, many adults believe that young people need guidance to use technology safely and wisely, so they download apps like parental control or family link to limit what their children watch or follow.

Information and Communication Technology (ICT) offers significant advantages for developing countries, especially in poor areas. It helps bridge gaps in education by providing access to online learning resources and virtual classrooms. People in remote areas can attend international universities and get certificates in different fields. ICT also boosts economic opportunities by enabling small businesses and reaching wider markets through e-commerce and digital platforms. It connects the world's economy by creating chances for small companies in remote areas to be a part of global projects. Overall, ICT can be a powerful tool for growth, innovation, and improving quality of life.

A) Answer the following questions. (3 points)

1. Why do many adults feel worried about young people using the internet? (2 points)
